

Reprinted from Daily Lift, August 20, 2012
Republished with permission of the Christian Science Publishing
Society. All rights reserved.

Fountain of life

By Elise L. Moore, C.S.B.

I love watching fountains, shooting water high into the air. It reminds me of the “fountain of life” that’s talked about in the Bible. In the fountain of life, well I think that we’re each like little individual drops of water. And we’re all working harmoniously together, no one’s jostling for place or position. And in this fountain of life, each drop of water isn’t responsible for shooting itself into the air. Why, it’s God that lifts us up. God is like the pump in this fountain. You might see the pump, usually you don’t see the pump, but it’s there working, always lifting, lifting us up. And so, that’s like the power of God. It’s always present. Lifting us up, to find our place and purpose, and working harmoniously with all of God’s other ideas.

So, today let’s think of ourselves as being part of this beautiful fountain of life, with God lifting you up to find your place and purpose, sparkling with all the other harmonious ideas of God.